

For Immediate Release

Contact:

“Sue Costello’s charismatic performance is mesmerizing as you march with her through her teenage years on the Dorchester streets through her life in New York and Hollywood.” –Colin Quinn

“...a wonderful journey filled with lots of laughter and love.”

-Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara.

“Sue’s show was amazing, hilarious, dark and brutally honest, Run don’t walk to the theatre!

- Molly Shannon

SUE COSTELLO From “The Fighter” Brings Her Acclaimed One-Woman Show Back Home to Boston for Two Nights Only

“Minus 32 Million Words” at Revolution Rock Bar

Shows: Sunday Dec 12th and Sunday, Dec 19th at 7:00 p.m.

Boston, MA – Nov 29, 2010 –Sue Costello, Dorchester native and acclaimed comic, actor and writer is set for her triumphant return to the Boston area with the 2-night run of her one-woman show “Minus 32 Million Words” at Revolution Rock Bar, on December 12th and 19th at 7pm.

The show—alternately hilarious and heartbreaking—tracks Costello’s life growing up in Dorchester and how she developed a desperate need for fame and money, only to realize that without trust in herself, nothing will make her happy.

“I’m so excited to be performing the shows in Boston the same week ‘The Fighter’ opens,” enthuses Sue Costello. “The show is about going for your dreams and second chances, all while remembering where you came from. It’s life imitating art,” adds Costello.

Rave reviews have poured in for Minus 32 Million Words, the show that mixes Costello’s street smart Boston savvy with her ability to bring a room full of patrons to tears—combining her trademark take-no-prisoners cutting wit and a poignant vulnerability. The Boston Herald called the show “powerful, thanks to Costello’s frank charisma and her ability to mingle humor with tragedy” and the Patriot Ledger mused that “Costello rivets the audience with a comic’s gift for delivery and wit and an actress’ skill with emotion.”

Through her irrepressible spirit and powerful delivery, Sue proves that her past does not have to become her future and shares that hope and joy with her audiences. Kristen Johnston called the show “brilliant and agonizingly funny,” and Kevin Nealon commented, “Great characters, great writing and hilarious delivery. She is the next Whoopi...only not black.” Patricia Clarkson agreed, saying “Sue Costello is an incredible talent – I LOVED this show!”

As to the origin of the show's title, Costello explains: "The show is called Minus 32 Million Words because I read an article in the New York Times that said that poor kids hear 32 million less words than rich kids and thought, I want to bust through those limitations and tell my story, even if "they" say I don't have the words."

About Sue Costello

Sue Costello co-created, produced, and starred in the self-titled Boston-based sitcom "Costello", for the Fox Network. She has also appeared on "NYPD BLUE", "Tough Crowd with Colin Quinn", and "Last Comic Standing". Ms. Costello has appeared in feature films "Southie" with Donnie Wahlberg, and in "Once in the Life" with Laurence Fishburne. Sue Costello will be appearing in the upcoming film "The Fighter", starring Christian Bale, Amy Adams, and Mark Wahlberg, opening Dec 10th.

Tickets are $25 and can be purchased in advanced @suecostello.com through paypal or with cash at the door.